MacKichan Scientific Workplace 6.0.29.

The MacKichan Scientific Workplace makes writing, sharing, typing math and science text easier than you ever imagined. It is an easy-to-use text processing tool that integrates math and text into the same environment. The MuPAD 5® computer algebra engine embedded in Scientific Workplace 6 allows the user to perform on-screen calculations and arrange them correctly.

With a whole new Mozilla-based architecture, Version 6 offers more flexibility than previous versions. Depending on your print and portable needs, you can save or export your documents in a variety of formats. It also has an open source program called MySpell which includes a large number of dictionaries for over 40 countries. When you type a word incorrectly, the program will display them with a wavy red line.

The MacKichan Scientific Workplace uses natural mathematical cues, so you don't have to apply complex syntax to be able to evaluate, simplify, solve, or put in mathematical expressions. Full suite capabilities are available. You can calculate, numerically or numerically, the derivative, the solution of algebraic and differential equations. With the commands in the menu, you can calculate over 150 units of physical measurement.

MacKichan Software, Inc. has gone out of business.

Sales have ceased for Scientific WorkPlace, Scientific Word, and Scientific Notebook.

MacKichan Software, Inc., after providing word processing software for those who speak the language of mathematics for forty years (under several names), closed its doors on June 30, 2021. This marks the end of sales and support for the MacKichan Software products.

All owners of Scientific WorkPlace, Scientific Word, or Scientific Notebook should have a serial number that was included in their purchase. This number is also included in the license file for your installation as the last line in the file. If you need to install your software on a new or different computer, you will need to re-activate the software on that computer using that serial number. The software can be activated as before, using the Help/Activate menu item. This contacts the MacKichan Software licensing server, which we will keep running for at least two years.

Sites with permanent site licenses will, of course, be free to use Scientific WorkPlace, Scientific Word, and/or Scientific Notebook as long as they like. Those sites that have paid for maintenance with home-use satellite licenses can continue, but will be unable to create new satellite licenses after their maintenance agreement expires.

We expect to make Scientific Word an open source product eventually. Since both Scientific WorkPlace and Scientific Notebook contain the proprietary computer algebra system MuPAD, they cannot be made open source. When the open source project for Scientific Word is established, an announcement will be made here.

We hope to make version 5.5 of Scientific Word available in the future. It currently contains several components that are licensed and not owned by MacKichan Software. These components need to be removed, and our intention is then to make Scientific Word version 5.5 open source.
