In our How to Mix Music guide we talked about why mixing dynamic sounds is a tough egg to crack. Vocals are super dynamic so they're trickier to mix.

But you don't have to pull your hair out every time you hit the mixing board to get the perfect vocal.

There's a dizzying amount of audio effects plugins out there. That's why we did the digging so you don't have to.

Here's 9 plugins that will help you get your vocals and beats fitting together like peas and carrots.

1. Vladg and Tokyo Dawn Proximity.

Ever recorded an entire vocal only to realize you had the mic in the wrong spot? No sweat.

The Vladg and Tokyo Dawn Proximity lets you change the mic placement AFTER you record. Pretty useful and pretty cool.

2. Acon Digital Multiply Chorus.

Vocals need some color. That's where a chorus plugin comes in.

Acon Digital's Multiply Chorus will thicken up your sound. It's a whole bunch of tiny delays (we're talking milliseconds) that fill out your vocals to liven them up a bit.

3. Melda MAutoPitch Auto-Tune.

Auto-tune's origins are pretty strange. But there's no denying that it's an invaluable tool for producers dealing with vocals.

Auto-tune is the vocal mixer's secret weapon. MAutoPitch is one of the best auto-tune plugins around. It fixes pitch, corrects sour notes, and even gives you that iconic T-pain/Cher effect if you want it.

This one comes in a free plugin bundle with all sorts of fun mixing toys.

4. Voxengo OldSkoolVerb.

Reverb for vocals is essential. Read hfs on windows 7 free. Reverb takes your vocals out of the room you recorded them in, and allows you to make your own sound space.

OldSkoolVerb has got you covered no matter what your needs are. From huge halls to a tiny closet, it gives you all the options to create the perfect sonic space in your mix.

5. Klanghelm DC1A.

The DC1A is a nifty little character compressor by Klanghelm. Adobe fusion free download. It uses sophisticated compression settings and an easy 2 knob setup that has you covered 'from smooth levelling to heavy pumping.'

Be sure to check out their absolutely EPIC demo video.

6. Alex Hilton A1 Trigger Gate.

If you're wondering how far you can push your vocal track this plugin will do a great job letting you know.

Using a step-style sequencer the A1 Trigger Gate packs in a boat load of cool effects. It's good for all sorts of stuff. So grab it and start experimenting.

7. Glitch Machines Hysteresis.

Just like any other part of a mix, vocals are a great place to experiment. The effects on Hysteresis definitely deliver a whole bundle of experimentation.

Free Cubase Plugins For Windows.

This delay plugin creates 'robotic artifacts and abstract music malfunctions.' Count me in.

8. Acustica Ochre EQ.

All good mixing needs a keen sense of EQ early on. Vocals are no exception.

That's why the Ochre from Acustica is so useful. Minecraft how to add mods mac. It's perfect for sculpting out the best vocals you can.

9. Fine Cut Bodies La Petite Excite.

Exciter plugins add subtle harmonics to your vocal track for some extra sonic-excitement in the high range.

Dynamic EQs are phenomenal. I use them all the time for precision mixing. They are for when the hard, static filter cuts and boosts won't suffice. I've been fortunate enough to have had hands-on experience with many high quality EQs with some sort of dynamic capability or another over the years, so I wanted to share with you my favorites. Don't worry if some of the bigger names aren't in the budget right now, I have two free ones for you as well! Here's my run-down of some of my favorite Dynamic EQs and a little bit about each of them.

What Is A Dynamic EQ?

First, we should talk a little bit about EQs, compressors and dynamic EQs. If you already know about these concepts, feel free to skip ahead. An EQ filter is generally static. It boosts, cuts and shapes incoming frequencies in a linear fashion. A compressor is non-linear. It 'reacts' to incoming signals to boost, attenuate and shape sounds being fed through it dynamically.

A dynamic EQ takes the best of both worlds and combines them in one place. An EQ that cuts, boosts, or shapes the sound depending on what is being fed into it. So instead of just a frequency node, gain, Q, and filter types we have additional tools like threshold, attack and release which can drive those EQ parameters. They react to internal or external sources.

Internal mode listens to the sound source itself; de-essing is a common application for this as an example. External mode listens to a different sound source and makes cuts or boosts the audio. Alright? Now that we have basics out of the way, let's check out some great dynamic EQs.

Neutron 2 by iZotope.

Neutron 2 is pretty much the crème-de-la-crème of Dynamic EQs. It has incredible precision and many years of world-class algorithms developed by iZotope behind it. You have the ability to turn on Dynamic Mode for any of the 12 filters and either increase or reduce the gain of the filter node. That reaction is dictated by either an internal or external sidechain audio source. Acrobat pdf reader for windows. Not only that, but Neutron 2 has a number of different band presets for the sidechain options making things even more precise. Add to that the 'Learn' and 'Masking' features which will actually show you where you might want to pay attention to and place your filter nodes and you have a truly first-class Dynamic EQ.

SurferEQ 2 by Sound Radix.

SurferEQ 2 is a different type of dynamic EQ than that in Neutron 2's EQ when set up for external sidechaining. Surfer EQ, instead of responding to gain values, responds to pitch. That means the filter nodes follow the incoming pitch of a signal instead of the volume. It's awesome. You can turn on the 'Surf' function to follow the incoming audio's pitch and you can choose which harmonic too. There are 5 main filters which can cover all the main harmonics (3, 5, 7, 9) and the fundamental. This makes SurferEQ 2 great for precision when you are mixing similar sounds and want one to always stand out.

You have global controls for the pitch tolerance, pitch threshold, 'surf time' which is how long the filter takes to move to the new pitch, as well as attack and recovery times. The filter's gain value is more-or-less static though unless you enable GTE mode, which will use a gate, so the filter will only be active when the threshold is crossed giving you even further control.

For example, when I use the SurferEQ to carve space out of a pad for a vocal. Turning on the GTE mode and setting a good threshold means that the filter node won't be active if there is no vocal which will let the pad remain completely full and unaltered. I only recently found out about this gem, but I'm really excited I did!

Trackspacer by Wavesfactory.

I've been raving about this plugin for the two years I've known about it. It just does such a great job so quickly that it's a must-have for all music producers! Also, the price tag isn't too bad. Trackspacer has a 32-band dynamic EQ behind the scenes. Once you set up the sidechain you can instantly and easily carve out room for anything in the sonic spectrum. Each band reacts independently making for decently precise sound carving. You don't have as much control of each one of those bands as you might in SurferEQ and Neutron but if you are looking for a quick and clean job, Trackspacer has you covered.

Ableton Live & Max Dynamic EQ by Joshua Casper (FREE)

I actually wrote a long tutorial on how to build your own dynamic EQ in Ableton Live using Max and Live's devices here on Ask.Audio a while back. You should check it out. You can follow along with the tutorial or download the completed Effect Rack for free. It only has 4 bands, but it does the trick. Plus, there's the extra bonus of following along with the tutorial to learn more than a few things about dynamic EQs, Live and Max along the way.

NOVA by Tokyo Dawn Records (Free)

This is a completely free Dynamic EQ VST and works wonders. Many people swear by it. So if you don't have the cash and want to see what the Dynamic EQ fuss is about, this is the right option for you. The free version is the younger sibling of a much more parameter-packed bigger EQ, but it still has the Dynamic EQ part and a boat load of other goodies; Parametric equalization, Dynamic equalization, Frequency selective compression, Multi-band compression, and Wideband compression to name a few.

Disclaimer.

While I have had hands-on experience with a large number of plugins, I haven't tried them all. That means I might have missed your favorite. Not because it's worse, but because I can't speak from experience about it. So, if I did miss your favorite or something of note, please drop us a comment below to help us all.

The goal is to assist artists and producers with getting premium sounding radio vocals without the need to have years of mixing experience in order to do so. These vocal presets use stock plugins from your favorite DAW of choice, and allow you to use your favorite pitch correction plugins if you would like.

If you're just getting started with vocal presets, they basically combine pre-saved EQ, Reverb, Compressor and Delay settings to get your vocals sounding top notch instantly.

Q: How can that be? Aren't most people's voices unique?

A: Yes, everyone's voice is unique. But, these presets offer a starting point that will cut 84% of the work out. You may want more reverb or you may want less compression. It's easy to change, just open up the presaved reverb setting and turn it down. Or, if you want less compression, just open the presaved compressor setting and increase the threshold. These presets are intuitive and were designed for anyone to be able to easily comprehend. If you have questions, hit me up.

Easily editable and tailored, these presets make editing and mixing vocals a breeze. Some producers like to use them so that they can learn how to mix vocals, others like to use these presets so that they can get great sounding vocals without needing to get caught up in the weeds.
